- Conduct respectful intake assessments and determine appropriate support pathways
- Build networks and partnerships with community organisations and service providers
- Represent ADA Australia at community events, forums, and workshops
- Identify service gaps and contribute to policy and procedure improvements
- Maintain accurate records and meet service targets
- Participate in team meetings, case discussions, and quality improvement initiatives

About You

- A tertiary qualification in human services, social work, behavioural science, or equivalent experience
- Experience advocating for people with disability within a social justice framework
- Strong knowledge of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander cultures and disability services
- Excellent communication, engagement, and negotiation skills
- Strong administrative and computer skills

Essential requirements

- Current driver's licence
- National criminal history check (less than 3 years old)
- Valid NDIS Worker Screening Clearance and Working with Children Blue Card
- Willingness to travel regionally, including occasional overnight trips

Why join us?

- Increase your take-home pay with generous salary packaging options, including meal and entertainment benefits
- Professional development through access to regular training and on-the-job projects
- Be part of a collaborative and inclusive workplace where diversity is celebrated, and our culture is built on respect, dignity and fairness
- Wellbeing support including access to an EAP services
- Convenient and free parking available
- Meaningfully impact the lives of vulnerable members of the community

Join us in empowering communities and creating culturally safe pathways for advocacy.
